CHAP. IV.

Another Diſappointment. — Mrs. Lovewell's Story. — A heedleſs and naughty Boy reclaimed. — End of the Day's Entertainment.

THOUGH all the young folks preſent were not equally acquainted with Eaſtern Tales, yet they could eaſily perceive that this which maſter Miller always had recited was very entertaining; and it likewiſe appeared that the moral was, that every perſon, high or low, young or old, ſhould be content with his ſtation; which moral indeed Mrs. Lovewell enforced, and, in a moſt agreeable and engaging manner, did all that was in her power to explain to them the eaſtern manner of telling ſtories, which contributed very much to the inſtruction and amuſement of her young hearers.

It would now have come to the turn of Maſter Searchwell to tell his ſtory; but here was another great diſappointment, for that young gen-

C tleman

PETER PRATEWELL Pretty Tales and Pretty Things LONDON, [1792?] HASKOLL COLLECTION, THE BODLEIAN LIBRARY Octavo